Re Boston letter to WFO, 2/5/75.

On 2/14/75, [redacted] Registration Unit, Internal Security Section, Criminal Division, U. S. Department of Justice, advised that records of that unit failed to reveal that subject had registered under provisions of the Foreign Agents Registration Act of 1938, as amended.

On 2/20/75, records of the Protocol Office, U.S. Department of State (USDS), revealed no information identifiable with subject and subject was not shown as an employee of the Portuguese Government in the United States.

On 2/24/75, [redacted] USDS, advised that one FRANCISCO SA CARNEIRO is presently the Secretary General of the Popular Democratic Party, a major political party in Portugal. He is about 40 years of age and recently visited the United States for about 6 days during the latter part of November and early December, 1974, on a public relations tour for the purpose of exposing him to the Portuguese community in the United States and establishing contacts in the United States. He met with representatives of the World Bank, members of the U.S. Congress and with Secretary of State HENRY A. KISSINGER.

FRANCISCO SA CARNEIRO

On January 21, 1975, BS T-1 advised that Francisco Sa Carneiro, who is a member of the Partido Popular Democratico (PPD) of Portugal, was granted a visa by the United States Embassy in Lisbon to enter the United States. The source described the PPD as a centrist political party which leans to the left.

The source advised that Carneiro went on a speaking tour to the large mainland Portuguese Communities in Newark, New Jersey and Fall River and New Bedford, Massachusetts. The reason for Carneiro's appearance was to orient the people in these communities in the United States to the eventual take-over of the Portuguese Political System by the PPD. He was also seeking money for the PPD from the American-Portuguese Communities, as well as votes from Portuguese immigrants in the United States because, under Portuguese Law, such immigrants can vote at the Portuguese Consulates for Portuguese Political Parties if the immigrant has been in the United States for less than five years.

Sources whose identities are concealed herein have furnished reliable information in the past except where otherwise noted.

BS T-1 was re-contacted on February 1, and March 17, 1975, and had no further information regarding the subject.

On February 20, 1975, records of the Protocol Office, United States Department of State (USDS), revealed no information identifiable with the subject and the subject was not shown as an employee of the Portuguese Government in the United States.

On February 24, 1975, [REDACTED] [REDACTED] USDS, advised that one Francisco Sa Carneiro is presently the Secretary General of the PPD, a major political party of Portugal. He is about 40 years of age and recently visited the United States for about 6 days during the latter part of November and early December 1974, on a Public Relations Tour for the purpose of exposing him to the Portuguese Community in the United States and establishing contacts in the United States. BS T-2 and BS T-3, who are familiar with Communist activities in the Southeastern Massachusetts area, including Fall River and New Bedford, Massachusetts, advised during April 1975, that they were not aware of Francisco Sa Carneiro either visiting the Southeastern Massachusetts area or soliciting funds or votes on behalf of any Portuguese Political Party.

BS T-2 acknowledged that Portuguese Nationals in the United States less than five years were eligible to vote in the Portuguese National Election on April 25, 1975, by registering at the Portuguese Consulates in this area.

FRANCISCO SA CARNEIRO

BS T-2 described the PPD as a Centrist Party and of the three major political parties in the recent national election in Portugal, the PPD was the one most favorable to the United States.

On February 14, 1975, [REDACTED] Registration Unit, Internal Security Section, Criminal Division, United States Department of Justice, advised that records of that unit failed to reveal that the subject had registered under the provisions of the Foreign Agents Registration Act of 1938 as amended.

FRANCISCO SA CARNEIRO

The Standard Times, a daily newspaper published at New Bedford, Massachusetts, issue of March 6, 1976, Page 1, contained an article entitled, "Portuguese Speaks at SMU - Autonomy for Azores Urged" by Robert J. Barcellos, Standard Times Staff Writer reading as follows:

Autonomy for the Azores and a program of Foreign economic assistance for his country are favored by the leader of Portugal's second-leading political party.

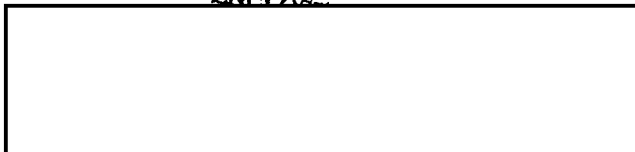

Speaking in Portuguese in the Southeastern Massachusetts University Auditorium last night, Dr. Francisco Sa Carneiro, secretary-general of the Popular Democratic Party, expressed the views of his party before an enthusiastic and at times demonstrative audience of more than 600.

The PDP, a center-left party akin to other Social Democratic groups in Europe, hopes to win a substantial vote in the April 25 election, just two years after the coup d'etat. Sa Carneiro was a minister without portfolio in the first short-lived post-coup government.

"We recommend that real autonomy is necessary for the Azores to enable--with a common constitution and the same basic laws--the local government to solve local problems," Sa Carneiro explained. To achieve this, he sees the need for a financial base derived from both local and foreign currency and for the local government to have a role in decision-making especially on international matters concerning the Azores.

"We think that this solution will enable the people of the Azores to be the master of their own life and their own future," he said, "but this implies that the links between the several islands and their populations be increased, creating a common structure in the political, economic and social fields."

FRANCISCO SA CARNEIRO

For his country's economic problems, Sa Carneiro said Portugal needs a sort of "Marshall Plan," explaining that "we can not solve them without the support of foreign countries, namely the Common Market nations, the United States, Canada and the free world."

Citing "the example of what happened in Vietnam" he said, "we don't need money for consumption," explaining that Portugal needs public and private investments.

"I personally think that an international committee for the support of Portugal would be useful in preparing plans--a joint effort in order to have Portugal a stable democracy and develop the country" he said.

Of his visit with U.S. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger earlier in the week, Sa Carneiro said, "We found here, as we found abroad, a very strong good will in helping Portugal and democracy." He indicated that "technical support in order to prepare our plans for development" was sought.

During the course of a 2½ hour program, Sa Carneiro explained his party's stand on a wide spectrum of subjects, including such economic concerns as employment problems created at home and abroad by Portuguese leaving their homeland, the demands for independence or autonomy in Azores and Madeira and the situation in Angola and Mozambique.

Sa Carneiro said his party opposed recognition of the Marxist regime that has taken control of Angola and was critical of President Francisco de Costa Gomes for extending recognition to that group.

During the question and answer period, two persons with Pro-socialist sympathies sought to speak, one of them seizing the microphone from a questioner as the audience angrily protested, some yelling "Communist."

Sa Carneiro has been in Canada and the United States this week, talking with leaders of both countries, including Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau and

FRANCISCO SA CARNEIRO

Kissinger. He is visiting areas with heavy concentration of Portuguese, such as Southeastern Massachusetts, in the hope of gaining votes and financial support from the emigres, many of whom are still enfranchised in their native land.
